

ETHICS IN SPORTS

Ethics in Sports is a program designed to teach young athletes how to compete honorably, while providing an opportunity to build strong life skills. It is through the abilities of coaches, officials, parents, and fans that determine what kind of experience a child will have. It is these abilities that could very well be the determining factor on whether an athlete will continue playing sports, or drop out all together.

Ethics in Sports is a tool to help provide the necessary means to teach athletes important skills while still enjoying the sport. The main goals of Ethics in Sports is to teach sportsmanship, leadership, compassion, goal setting, and work ethic. Ethics in Sports helps parents, coaches, athletes, officials, and youth organizations how to develop an effective youth program.

It is through the REC and TOROS principles, that the essence of Ethics in Sports is developed.

Respect for Teammates, Opponents, Rules, Officials, and Self Encourage
Communication